MAUI

KIHEI

There are a myriad of reasons Maui is consistently named the planet's best island. The bottom line is Maui is simply intoxicatingly beautiful. Trade winds rustle the palm trees, the sunsets are so stunning they are a daily celebration and the perfume of hibiscus scents the air. The weather is warm year-round and there are miles and miles of swimmable beaches. Maui is a nature-lover's paradise with the waters between Maui, Molokai and Lanai home to the densest population of Humpback whales in the world from December to April. Even with the wealth of tropical beauty, the history, and succulent flavors, the enduring reason Maui is so loved is the Hawaiian culture itself and the warm, welcoming sense of aloha.
