LOPUD 1483

LOPUD, CROATIA

Lopud 1483 is an extraordinary historic residence embraced by verdant terraced gardens and sweeping panoramas of the Adriatic. Originally constructed as a Franciscan monastery in 1483, this Croatian luxury estate has undergone a meticulous restoration, preserving its centuries-old charm while seamlessly integrating modern luxuries. Nestled discreetly on the serene island of Lopud, the secluded, luxurious villa rental offers an unparalleled summer retreat steeped in history and elegance.

Within its storied walls, Lopud 1483 harmoniously blends artisanal craftsmanship with Renaissance splendor. The estate's expansive living areas are adorned with meticulously curated period furnishings, complemented by an exquisite art collection featuring masterpieces such as Mattia Preti's "Liberation of Saint Peter" and a magnificent 16th-century Ushak carpet. Lofty exposed beam ceilings and textured stone walls provide a striking contrast to the contemporary seating arrangements. The grand formal dining room, seating up to twelve, serves as an ideal setting for intimate gatherings or lavish feasts. The luxury villa rental comprises five private bedrooms, each with an ensuite bathroom and breathtaking views of the azure sea or the monastery's serene medicinal gardens. Additional luxuries include a Hammam and a state-of-the-art fitness room outfitted with Technogym equipment, ensuring all-around wellness is always within reach.

The estate's enchantment extends outdoors, where impeccably landscaped gardens, a plunge pool, a private beach access, and multiple alfresco dining areas beckon guests to unwind. The terrace, with its commanding views over Lopud's natural beauty, provides a sublime setting for savoring a morning refreshment or indulging in a glass of wine as the sun sets. Here, every detail has been crafted to celebrate the island's timeless allure, offering an atmosphere that epitomizes both serenity and grandeur. History and nature coalesce into an unforgettable experience within the walls and gardens of this luxury villa in Croatia.

LOPUD

The Croatian Adriatic Coast is a glorious stretch of shoreline that graces the eastern expanse of the Adriatic Sea. The Croatian part of the Adriatic is distinguished by its indented coastline, the most pronounced in the Mediterranean, where karst topography prevails. Here, the land tells tales of geological epochs past, with limestone formations sculpted by time and the elements. The Adriatic's waters caress over 1,300 islands, each a unique jewel, with the Croatian coast claiming the lion's share of these scattered gems. The sea's northern basin is shallow, while the southern reaches plunge into abyssal depths, with the seabed falling away to over 4,000 feet at its deepest point.
