QUINTA DA BELLA VISTA

SINTRA, LISBON

Quinta da Bella Vista is an iconic Villa among Lisbon's most enchanting mansions. Brimming with historical and pop culture intrigue, this Palladian behemoth was the estate of Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of the Sherlock Holmes series. Lush Mediterranean foliage, aromatic groves, and far-reaching views define this majestic residence, authoritatively straddling the Sintra Hills. Ten acres of parklands curate a boundless sense of space, matching vertiginous views over the Portuguese countryside. Embodying the purest expression of aristocratic grace and fine living, this luxury vacation Villa satiates the most discerning luxury adventurer.

The estate's wondrous grounds span four residences: The Palacio, Villa Camelia, Villa Monserrate, and Casa Bohemia. Each home is more enchanting than the last, flaunting a unique gradient of Palladian opulence and Mediterranean charm. Eternally elegant interiors are updated with subtle imprints of modernity, making up aesthetically immaculate spaces drenched in sunlight. Monumental arches welcome an astounding chef's kitchen and dining hall, with regal chandeliers and exposed original masonry. The beautiful old-world formal concept dining space is a lovely congregation spot for larger groups. Individually appointed, each of the fourteen ensuite bedrooms has a distinct personality, while the additional bunk room is perfect for the little ones. Top-of-the-line highlights include heated floors, fireplaces, Sonos sound systems, and much more. This beautiful property was and remained a most prestigious venue for celebrities, celebratory galas, and elite weddings a century down the line.

The captivating outdoors are defined by awe-inspiring vistas and majestic farmlands, fully immersing guests in the elements. There is no shortage of high-end amenities in the open, starting from the two heated pools with underwater sound systems, fire pits, and manicured gardens. Enjoy the fresh produce from the self-supported estate while savoring a fine red before ethereal sunsets over a boundless sea of undulating hills.
