TERRAVISTA COMPLEX

In the Brazilian state of Bahia, the idyllic coastal town of Trancoso offers visitors a reprieve from the ordinary. Set against the crystal-clear waters of the Atlantic, this little slice of paradise is a captivating blend of natural beauty, rustic allure, and luxurious living. In the 1970s, Trancoso began attracting many hippies, who coexisted peacefully with the local fishermen. Together, they enjoyed the unspoiled charm of the area – from the pristine beaches to the lush central square of the town. While its residents have opened their tropical haven up to the world, they also preserved the area's natural simplicity that renders it so unique. You won't find grand resorts, Michelin-starred eateries, bustling nightlife, luxury shopping districts, or scenic marinas here. Instead, the appeal lies in its unadorned beauty, which has drawn an impressive array of visitors, including Naomi Campbell, Leonardo DiCaprio, Beyoncé, and chic Brazilian high-flyers. Local property owners, craftsmen, and fishermen have all worked together to protect their secluded paradise, constructing intimate houses and boutique accommodations and maintaining a modest array of restaurants and cafes. With large hotel chains and tourists seeking a more polished experience having left the beaches and town square unspoiled, Trancoso remains an exquisite oasis of unrivaled beauty.
